McLibel: Burger Culture on Trial by John Vidal "The McLibel trial, the longest case in British legal history, is an unlikely morality tale of our times. In 1990 McDonald's slapped writs on five London activists for allegedly libelling it in a leaflet entitled What's Wrong With McDonald's?. Three were unwilling to fight a legal battle. McLibel: Burger Culture on Trial: John Vidal ... This is the story of David Morris and Karen Steel, defendants in the longest libel trial in British History. Guardian journalist John Vidal is obviously and rightly sympathetic to the McLibel 2 as he documents their Trial. McLibel: Burger Culture on Trial by John Vidal McLibel is the unlikely but true story of how a pamphlet called "What's Wrong with McDonald's" led to the longest trial in British history. In what has become front-page news around the globe, the trial pitted the multibillion dollar corporation against five members of London Greenpeace accused by McDonald's of libel.
